Leah D. Daughtry is an expert in strategic and event planning, project management, and community engagement. As president and CEO of a boutique strategic planning firm, On These Things, LLC, she's built a formidable reputation for transforming businesses and organizations into well run entities primed for global impact.

A multi-faceted strategist with a gift for solving highly complex problems with remarkable speed and precision, Leah also has a proven capacity to manage multi-billion dollar budgets, and develop internal and external communication strategies. She's worked as Chief of Staff to notable political figures, such as former U.S. Secretary of Labor, Alexis Herman, and former Chairs of the Democratic Party, Howard Dean and Terry McAuliffe.

Having served in 2008 and 2016 as the Chief Executive Officer of the Democratic National Convention, she is the first person in Democratic Party history to hold the position twice. Her success in this role was a direct outcome of her brilliance as a strategist, in combination with her natural ability to develop, lead, and inspire teams.

Daughtry is the co-author, along with Donna Brazile, Yolanda Caraway, and Minyon Moore, of For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Politics (St. Martin's Press, 2018). In it the four most powerful African American women in politics share the story of their friendship and how it has changed politics in America.

With a rare skill set for managing people, processes, and policies with ease and efficiency, Leah is heralded as an in-demand consultant with invaluable expertise to organizations seeking exponential growth. A consummate servant-leader, her role as pastor of The House of the Lord Church in Washington, DC, is also one of her greatest passions.

From pulpits to public forums to political platforms, in her own way, Leah Daughtry is an alchemist. An electrifying speaker full of power and charisma, she transforms corporate teams, congregations, and communities for the better. Beyond her amazing career, she's also a loving aunt, dedicated mentor, and avid shoe lover.
